Tips for writing professional job search documents

In most job searches, how you look on paper determines whether you’ll be offered an interview. Your résumé, cover letter, references and thank you notes are essential tools to get you to the career you want. This booklet provides useful information and samples of professional documents that can give you an edge when applying for jobs.

Cover letters

While many companies and job postings do not require a cover letter in the application process, it is highly recommended that you always submit a professional, polished, relevant cover letter with your résumé. Create one now to have at the ready when you find a job posting.

What is a cover letter?

A cover letter introduces you to a prospective employer and directly relates your qualifications to the specific position you’re applying for.

A cover letter is the perfect place to:
• Weave together your experiences with the position qualifications
• Make it obvious to the recruiter why you are a highly qualified candidate
• Entice the hiring manager to read your résumé

A cover letter not only offers you the opportunity to link your unique set of talents, experiences and interests, it also serves as your formal introduction to someone who could influence your job search. Additionally, a cover letter sets the stage for the details and experiences captured in your résumé.

Various uses of a cover letter

• To introduce yourself
  o When you are contacting an organization to see if they have any opportunities available
  o When you are emailing your résumé to a contact and need something for the body of the email

• To apply for a specific position
  o When you are applying to a specific job posting and want to highlight your key qualifications that relate to the job by describing your relevant experiences, skills and education

• To network
  o To incorporate your friends, family, colleagues, etc. in your job search process, you may send a business letter or email to introduce yourself, highlight your résumé, and outline your career interests, key skills, experiences and qualifications as they relate to the career path you are seeking

When determining what to write in a cover letter, ask yourself:

Who am I sending my résumé to and why?

What would I like the potential employer to know about me that proves I am the perfect candidate for this opportunity?
Why prepare a cover letter in advance?

- It’s practical: If you have a prepared cover letter, when one is requested you are not scrambling last minute to put it together. Although you’ll need to customize your prepared letter to address the details of each job posting, having the framework set will give you a great advantage and take the pressure off when it’s time to apply.

- It’s savvy: A well crafted cover letter, even when not required, serves as an enticing introduction to your résumé. It also gives you an advantage over other candidates who did not take the time to write a polished cover letter.

When should I send a cover letter?

You must send a cover letter with a job application whenever one is requested, and we recommend sending one every time you apply to a position. If you’re sending your résumé digitally, you may use your cover letter as the body of the email.

Cover letter content

- A brief introduction that references the position you are interested in and how you found it, as well as the contact who referred you (if applicable)

- Why you are interested in the company and/or position

- Why you are qualified for the position, or, if you are not using the letter for a specific position, summarize your experiences and accomplishments
  - Be detailed and describe your key experiences and qualities that directly relate to the qualifications listed in the job posting
  - Highlight three to five of your relevant professional accomplishments and directly relate them to the job description and/or company

- Thank the reader for their time and consideration, and include your email and phone number

TIP: It is essential to customize or tailor your cover letter to the specific job posting and organization to which you are sending your cover letter and résumé.

Essential questions your cover letter should answer

Paragraph one: Introduction
Who are you and why are you writing?

Paragraph two: Highlight your qualifications
How has your education, previous employment, or other experiences prepared you for the position?

Paragraph three: Connect to the company
Why is this company or job a good fit for you?

Paragraph four: Closing statement
How interested are you and where can you be reached for an interview?
Key cover letter tips

• Take the time to thoroughly review the company’s website to determine its values and identity, and include your accomplishments, philosophies and skills that align with the company’s mission.

• Do not repeat word-for-word what is on your résumé, but cite a noteworthy achievement that entices the reader to want to learn more about you.

• Keep your letter brief — no more than one page — and in a professional format. The longer the letter, the less likely it will be read.

• Type all correspondence, but sign the letter if you are sending a hard copy.

• Proofread, proofread and proofread! Have someone else proofread your letter, and then proofread it again.

• Your cover letter and résumé should be in the same style, font and paper.

• Ensure your email address and voicemail greeting are professional and appropriate.

• If you know the name of the person you sent your cover letter and résumé to, follow up with them directly in one week.
Cover letter template

Your name

Company city, state and Zip code

Dear Mr. / Ms. __________:

Introduction: Explain why you are writing the letter. State your intention clearly. Include the reason you are contacting the person, or include the title of the position to which you are applying and how you learned about the opening (include the name of the source where you saw the posting). If a networking contact referred you to the organization, mention the person’s name and explain your connection. NOTE: You do not need to start with, “My name is...” as your name is included at the bottom of the letter.

Body: Describe your experiences and qualifications. Adapt your cover letter to the specific job and company or organization. Emphasize relevant achievements, skills and experiences. Convey to the prospective employer why you are a solid candidate for the position, demonstrate your understanding of the business, and explain why you will be an asset. Ensure that all experiences and skills you mention are reflected in your résumé.

Closing: The final paragraph should thank the contact for considering you for the position. Be sure to include how and when you may be contacted. Always include your email address and telephone number.

Sincerely,

{Your signature}

Your Name Typed

If sending your cover letter as the body of an email (with résumé attached), you do not need to include the date or full company address information. However, you should still include your contact information at the bottom of the email below your name.

TIP: When you do not have a company contact name, include a more generic title that references the company (e.g. Quicken Loans representative) or To whom it may concern.
Sample #1: Job description and appropriate cover letter

Job description:

Audit Staff Accountant
Western Financial Advisors

As an Audit Staff Accountant with Western Financial Advisors, you will work on various assigned segments of engagements, in some instances assuming substantial responsibility (under supervision) for small accounting engagements involving compiled or reviewed financial statements and tax returns.

QUALIFICATIONS:

• Must have a bachelor’s degree, MBA in accounting or finance preferred
• Ideal candidates should have at least three years of solid, relevant work experience

REQUIRED SKILLS:

• Possess strong understanding of auditing principles, financial statements, and analytical and problem solving skills
• Demonstrate a solid grasp of business concepts, realistic judgment, and quantitative and critical thinking skills
• Strong interpersonal skills and ability to interact with upper management
• Ability to plan, organize, and prioritize multiple tasks within a defined time period

This excellent opportunity includes a highly professional working environment, as well as a competitive salary based on experience and a performance bonus. This position also includes fringe benefits including paid health care. In addition, as an independent member of the BDO Seidman LLP Alliance, Western Financial Advisors offers additional training programs and work experience.

Cover letter email sample:

SUBJECT: Audit Staff Accountant Position

Dear Western Financial Advisors Representative:

I am attaching my résumé for your consideration for the Audit Staff Accountant position posted on the Wayne State University Mike Ilitch School of Business waynebizcareers.com site. I

In the intro, reference the job posting by title, posting number if provided and where you found it.
recently earned my MBA from Wayne State with a concentration in accounting and finance, and I am very interested in further developing my career in auditing. In addition to my relevant degrees, my background and experience in accounting and corporate finance directly relate to Western Financial Advisors’ audit needs.

I have approximately four years of accounting experience working as a collateral auditor with Smith & Adams accounting firm prior to graduate school. In this position I was responsible for following up on outstanding audit issues and preparing audit programs. I am confident that the experience gained working in audit has helped me develop a strong understanding of accounting principles, as well as the strong verbal and written communication skills required for the position.

Furthermore, I am currently employed at ABC Corporation where I work in the corporate finance department. Beginning as an intern six months ago, I have been responsible for various projects assigned by upper management. In my short time here I have had the opportunity to provide cost analysis reports for specific projects and presented a planned budget to the budget committee for the upcoming fiscal year. All of my reports were completed and submitted ahead of the projected deadlines. Additionally, I assisted in contract agreements for new office equipment that cost in excess of $3 million.

My résumé is attached to provide you with specific details on my background and qualifications. I would appreciate the opportunity to interview for the Audit Staff Accountant position as I am certain that a face-to-face meeting would more fully reveal my positive attitude and ability to meet your expectations. Please contact me via email at bizcareers@wayne.edu or via phone at 313-577-4781.

Thank you for your time and consideration. I look forward to meeting you.

Sincerely,

John Doe

Dear Mr. Anders:

Thank you for speaking with me this morning about your current opening for a compliance specialist. As you suggested, I am sending along my résumé to give you additional information prior to our meeting next week. It expands on these qualifications that are essential for success as a compliance specialist:

- Nine years of experience in banking and financial services, including participation in audit procedures and in-depth involvement with the full range of compliance issues
- History of initiative and leadership in identifying and reducing compliance risks
- Strong skills in tracking, monitoring, documenting and reporting
- Ability to manage multiple detailed projects simultaneously

I look forward to our meeting at 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday and learning more about this exciting opportunity with your company.

Sincerely,

Mr. Thomas Elder
Director of Marketing
Sabatino Specialties Inc.
259 Vine Street
Cincinnati, OH 45202

Dear Mr. Elder:

Rachel Koehler (current president of the Cincinnati Chapter of the American Marketing Association) suggested that I contact you about marketing opportunities that you may know of in your role as chairman of the Cincinnati Incubator marketing board.

I am a current business student and am interested in relocating to the Cincinnati area this summer for an internship opportunity. I am eager to find a young technology company that needs a new marketing professional to assist in introducing innovations to various business markets, and Sabatino Specialties Inc. is exactly the type of company that interests me.

My background and interests are a good fit for an emerging high-tech company. Since working toward my Bachelor of Business Administration degree, I have gained experience in market research and interacting with customers or potential clients. As my résumé highlights, I understand how to position and present new marketing concepts to business audiences, such as emphasizing business benefits and addressing target customer needs and concerns.

I will call you early next week to follow up. I appreciate any ideas, referrals or assistance you can offer.

Sincerely,

Human Resources
XPD Stores
1234 Street
Troy, MI 48084

Dear sir or madam:

I am a current student at the Wayne State University Mike Ilitch School of Business, and I am interested in obtaining a summer internship with XPD Stores. I am a hard-working and energetic people-person who is eager to contribute my education and skills to a successful retail organization like yours.

Throughout my academic experience at Wayne State, I have worked full-time, most recently in a retail environment. Currently at JCPenney, I was promoted to a supervisory position after consistently exceeding my sales goals. I lead a team of sales employees and oversee merchandising for one department; consequently, I have greatly developed my leadership and sales skills. Moreover, as a current student pursuing a management degree, I have gained a strong understanding of business principles, and in one course project I created a merchandising system for a start-up retail facility. This project provided insight into incorporating technology into a retail sales environment, an issue which many retail businesses encounter.

Combined with my sincere interest in the retail industry, my academic and relevant work experiences make me a strong candidate for a summer internship with XPD Stores. Please contact me via email at bizcareers@wayne.edu or via phone at 313-555-0000. Thank you for your consideration and I look forward to hearing from you.

Enclosure: Résumé
Résumés

A résumé is an essential job search tool. It is a polished and professional document that represents you. As the primary interface between you and hundreds of potential employers, your résumé should be enticing, flawless and easily readable in about 20 seconds.

Believe it or not...

The average employer will spend approximately 15 seconds reading your résumé.

Fifty percent of all résumés never get read...EVER.

No one single item gets you selected — the whole package is key.

Even if you are highly qualified, if your résumé is poorly written you’ll never get selected.

True or false? The purpose of a résumé is to get a job.

False! The purpose of a résumé is to outline your skills and qualifications as they relate to the position to which you are applying. The goal of a résumé is to obtain an interview.

A common misconception is that a résumé is used to get a job, but the reality is that a résumé only gets you through the first candidate screening so that you may be selected for an interview.

Therefore, your résumé should:
• provide a brief overview of your very best academic and relevant professional achievements, contributions and skills
• give just enough details to entice the reader to want to know more about you, which will prompt them to contact you and invite you for an interview.

REMEMBER: The purpose of a résumé is to highlight your qualifications; the goal of the résumé is to get an interview.
Résumé writing: What to include

♦ A clear and specific objective and/or professional summary

An objective is essentially your goal statement that helps clearly focus your résumé on exactly what you want to do. Your résumé content should relate to your objective. For example, if your objective states that you want a full-time position in marketing, then your résumé content should outline your skills, knowledge and experiences that demonstrate you are qualified for a full-time position in marketing.

Sample objectives:
• To obtain an entry-level position in the field of information systems specializing in systems development
• Seeking a marketing internship for winter semester 2017
• To obtain the Assurance Internship with Ernst & Young

A professional summary is a short description of your professional skills, knowledge and experience that directly relate to the position. A professional summary is best used by those with some professional experience. The most effective professional summaries include short, action statements that quickly identify your relevant key areas of expertise and accomplishments.

Sample professional summaries:
• Performance-driven manager eager to obtain a challenging position in finance. Possess knowledge of financial and economic operations, combined with exceptional skills in planning and managing projects within budget and time constraints. Demonstrated experience in budgeting, cost controlling and providing effective business solutions in a creative and analytical approach while surpassing productivity and performance objectives.
• Energetic sales and financial services professional experienced in managing corporate finance, sales, and business operations. Successfully developed and maintained client relationships resulting in respected business reputation and increased sale.

♦ Education, skills and past employment pertinent to the position to which you are applying

The key words are underlined: Your résumé must relate directly to the job description. Effective résumés identify the aspects of your background, skills and experience that relate to what the employer is looking for. Clearly describe what you can offer and how you’re qualified for the position.

♦ Focused résumé content and experience descriptions that concisely outline your key contributions, successes, accomplishments and how you “got results”
If you only list your responsibilities, you are not telling employers anything about the scope, quality or effectiveness of your work. It’s not enough to just say what you did. Did you do it well? Prove it! How did you contribute? What was the impact of your work? Include qualifiers when possible.

Sample results-based experience descriptions:

- Chosen by manager as most efficient among 12 servers; selected to cater to largest section of dining tables, serving approximately 100 customers per night
- Supervised operation of 80 employees, encouraging cooperation and efficiency; implemented team building projects and sustained 90% employee retention

♦ Action verbs in first person (e.g., manage or managed, not manages)

Start each sentence with a descriptive action verb such as established, managed, organized, etc. The verb tense (past or present) should be appropriate for when the experience occurred. Always use the active voice.

Sample action statements:

- Coordinated relationships with other departments, which helped standardize procedures across all operating groups
- Analyzed mortgage financing options, insurance documents and closing statements; recognized as top performer in spotting and correcting errors that would hold up processing of documents

♦ Locations (city, state) and dates (month and year) in all sections, including education, work experience, activities, honors received, etc.

Experience descriptions: From bland to effective

Résumé writing: What not to include

- Inaccurate information, embellishments or lies
- A picture/photo or information about marital status, gender, sexual orientation, religion, height, weight or health
- “References available upon request” – employers know you’ll provide references if they request them.
- Hard-to-read or microscopic fonts (never go below 10pt font)
- Complicated formatting and fancy fonts
  - Do not include tables, graphical text boxes, graphical symbols, headers, footers, inconsistent tab layout, etc.
- Paragraphs and long sentences
  - Complete sentences and periods are not necessary in a résumé.
  - Use only clear and concise impact statements.
- Personal pronouns – avoid using “I” or “my” statements
- Excessive use of superlatives
  - Rather than writing you are a "sensational salesperson," add details that demonstrate your skills, such as “recognized as salesperson of the month for six consecutive months.”
- Too general of a document name
  - Imagine being a recruiter and getting several hundred attachments per week all named “résumé.doc.” Use your name as the title of your résumé (e.g., SmithJohn-Résumé.doc).

Important points

- Ensure your résumé is easy to read and conveys information quickly.
  - Short statements and bullet form are easier to read.
- Consider your audience.
  - Spell out abbreviations and ensure all content is understandable to non-technical professionals.
- Experience descriptions should focus on your accomplishments, contributions and results of your efforts as they relate to the position you’re seeking, rather than simply listing bland job duty descriptions or listing of responsibilities.
- Be honest.
- Proofread, proofread, proofread!
  - The résumé you send out must be flawless – without mistakes or typos.
  - Don’t trust computer spell checkers; read every word out loud to be sure it is correct.
- Make good use of transferable skills, for example: What did you learn as a cashier at McDonald’s that will help you become a successful accountant?
Formatting your résumé

Keep your résumé to one page. You may go to two pages if you have more than 10 years of relevant work experience. Remember, your résumé is just a highlight of your academic and work experience; there is no need to provide every detail.

Make it easy for the employer to locate pertinent information quickly. Use clear headings, appropriate spacing and bullets. Use fonts that are easy to read and use bullets to emphasize important points. If you are a current college student, structure the résumé with education first, then work experience.

Format options

• Reverse chronological
  o List your most recent information and experiences first.
  o Use a reverse chronological résumé format when you have been consistently employed (even if that means you’ve worked every summer while going to school full time during the fall and winter).

• Functional
  o Focus on your key competency areas. While a functional résumé still includes dates and descriptions of your experiences, the experience descriptions are categorized into your strength areas, rather than by the position.
  o Use a functional résumé when:
    ▪ you do not have much relevant work experience
    ▪ you have gaps of time between employment
    ▪ you are making a career change
    ▪ you want to emphasize key aspects of your experiences

• Combination
  o Begin with a clear and concise professional summary, then use a functional format to highlight your qualifications that relate to the position you are seeking, and finally present a reverse chronological format of your employment history o Use a combination format résumé when:
    ▪ you have steady work experience with demonstrated growth and you are looking to continue your career progression
    ▪ you have steady work experience with demonstrated growth, but you are wanting a career change
How do I know which format to use?

There are thousands of résumé writing resources available to you online, in print and from anyone around you. As you will soon learn, everyone is happy to share an opinion about your résumé and many opinions will vary. It is up to you to create a résumé that is professional, focused, interesting to read, easy to read and representative of you.

Is your résumé format working? Try this!

If the average employer only spends 15 seconds scanning your résumé, what will they notice? How does the résumé actually look?

Take a 30-second scan for yourself:
• Are lines neat? Evenly spaced?
• Do tabs line up?
• How does it appear in print vs. on the computer screen?
• What is the eye drawn to?
• What does and does not stand out?

Now, put the 15 second scan to the test! Have a friend or family member look over your résumé for 15 seconds.

• What did they notice?
• What didn’t they see?
Résumé content outline

♦ Contact information
The top of your résumé should include your name, complete address, email address and your telephone number.
  • Ensure your voicemail announcement is courteous and professional and your email address is professional and appropriate

♦ Education
Outline your educational experiences in reverse chronological order (most recent first). Include the name of each school, location (city, state), degree, major, GPA and dates attended.
  • If you attended several colleges or schools, maintain the same sequence of information for each school. Once you are in college, you do not need to include your high school education.
  • Include your cumulative, or overall, grade point average (GPA) and/or major GPA.

♦ Experience
Your work history, volunteer experience, and relevant course projects may be listed in reverse chronological order or by key competency areas. Each experience description should include short action statements describing your relevant responsibilities and accomplishments
  • If you use the functional format, you will need to include a separate section listing where you obtained the experience (i.e., position title, organization, dates, location).
  • Maintain the same order of information for each position. If the sequence is job title, company name, location, dates and description, maintain the same sequence and format for each position.

♦ Skills
Include computer knowledge, business-related skills, certifications and licensures, and languages.

♦ Affiliations, memberships and activities
Include a list of the student organizations and professional associations with which you are involved, with organization title, role or office title (e.g., treasurer, secretary, member) and dates of membership.
  • If you hold an officer or committee position or contributed significantly, and your experience is relevant to the position to which you are applying, you may want to include the description in your experience section.

♦ Honors and scholarships
Includes awards, dean’s list honors, scholarships, etc. and the dates you received the honor or recognition.

Curriculum vitae

Commonly referred to as a CV, a curriculum vitae is the primary job search document for those who are interested in pursuing a career in academia (such as a university faculty position), scientific research, or a job outside of the United States.

Similar to a résumé, a CV is a summary of your academic and work experience. Both a résumé and CV contain your name, contact information, education, work experience, honors and awards and skills sections, and a CV is written in the same format as a résumé, including section headers, bullets, dates and short phrases that begin with action verbs to describe your experience.

How does a curriculum vitae differ from a résumé?

A CV contains information that is not included in a résumé, such as:

- A research section that includes a summary of your research conducted, such as hypotheses, overview of your method, and findings
- A publications and presentations section that includes a citation of all of your research and academic papers that have appeared in journals and professional publications or that you presented at professional conferences and meetings, cited in the appropriate professional format (e.g., APA, MLA)
- Personal information, such as nationality, gender and date of birth. Keep in mind this personal information should only be included when job searching outside of the United States, and you are encouraged to check with the employer to see what information they want.

In addition, the format is slightly different. A CV is often significantly longer than a résumé, with the shortest CV length typically at three pages.

For more information on CVs, visit:
http://jobsearch.about.com/cs/curriculumvitae/a/curriculumvitae.htm
References

At some point during your job search, an employer will request references. Your references should be people you know on a professional level either through work or school; never use a relative or a significant other as your reference. Choose references based on their knowledge of you, not on their prestige.

When providing a list of references, it is best to provide a separate page on which your references are organized in a formal manner. The reference page should list the person’s name, title, company/employer, employer location, contact information (email and phone), and relationship to you.

Reference page tips

• Use a consistent format.
  o Your reference page should be on the same paper and in the same font and layout as your cover letter and résumé, creating a consistent look to your application package.

• Include three to four references who can speak to your professional skills and abilities.
  o Examples: supervisors, professors, subordinates, vendors, customers, prior employees, people you have worked with on a volunteer basis, etc.
  o Never include family members or significant others, unless specifically requested.
  o Only list references who are articulate and relatively easy to contact.

• Proofread your reference page carefully.
  o Spell the person’s name, job title and company correctly. Also make sure their contact information, company and position are up to date.

• Unless requested, do not attach your reference page when you first submit your résumé.
  o There is no need to include “references available upon request” on your résumé. Employers know you’ll provide references if they request them.

• Maintain contact with your references.
  o Speak to your references ahead of time if you know they are going to be contacted by a potential employer. Provide your reference with a copy of your résumé and the job description of the position for which you are applying. The more information you provide, the more accurately your reference can speak to your abilities and qualifications as they relate to the employer or position.
  o Once you have secured a position, let your references know and send a thank you.

• Always send a thank you letter and be careful to not overuse references.

Thank you notes

It is proper etiquette to send a thank you note to a potential employer, a recruiter or interviewer, a reference, or to any other professional with whom you would like to express appreciation for their consideration, time, information shared, or a gift (such as a sponsorship, scholarship donation, etc.).

A thank you note should be sent as soon as possible, ideally within 24 hours. In today’s business world where people are frequently traveling or working inconsistent hours or at various locations, an email thank you letter is appropriate, but a neatly handwritten thank you letter offers an added personal touch. If sending a handwritten thank you letter, ensure that you use professional stationery (résumé paper is fine) or a professional thank you card.

Even if you are unsure of what to say in a thank you letter, or if you are sending it out a week late, please keep in mind a personalized and sincere thank you letter is always appreciated.

A thank you letter should contain:

- An expression of gratitude for the service, gift or information given
- A specific reference to the action or object that prompted your thank you letter (i.e. the service, gift or information)
- A specific reference to how you will make use of the gift or information, or why you value what was provided or given
